

“NH Cemeteries and Gravestones Tell Long-forgotten Stories”

Springfield Historical Society April 9, 2009

The Springfield Historical Society, in cooperation with the NH Humanities Council, is very pleased to present speaker Glenn Knoblock at our general meeting on Thursday evening, April 9th at 7:00 p.m. in the Springfield Town Hall. Rubbings, photographs and slides illustrate the rich variety of gravestones to be found in our own neighborhoods, but they also tell long-forgotten stories of the Great Awakening, the Throat Distemper epidemic, and the American Revolution. Mr. Knoblock explains how to read these stone “pages” that give insight into the vast genealogical book of New Hampshire. The public is cordially invited to attend this fascinating program and to view some of the outstanding work done by President Patsy Caswell and her committee in documenting the many cemeteries both large and small located in the town of Springfield, NH. The Springfield Town Hall at 23 Four Corners Road, Springfield, NH 03284 is handicapped accessible. Admission is free and refreshments will be served following the program.
